curiosity

The residents of Montalcino "ilcinesi" called the wine Bruno (brown), since the wine had an intense brownish colour. Over centuries Bruno became Brunello.

Food pairing

Ideal with red meat like "Fiorentina" or matured cheeses like Pecorino.

Vintage 2003

In 2003, weather conditions in Montalcino were excellent, with sufficient winter rainfall and a consistently sunny summer. This favored optimal grape development. The harvest began early in September, with production reduced by about 5% due to the summer heat. The Sangiovese grapes were very concentrated and healthy. The wines from this vintage have a high quality level, notable body and structure, and excellent ageing potential. (Consorzio Brunello)
